

Using their large national network to broadcast a negative campaign "documentary" weeks before an election is an abuse of Sinclair Broadcasting's obligation to serve the public interest. Please do not allow this inappropriate corporate behavior.

In this country we are beginning to see the effect of media consolidation: large companies control the formerly public airwaves and use their market strength to impose their political ideology on the public. Our democracy is weaker for it.

Does Sinclair Broadcast Group, Inc. have a First Amendment Right to Free Speech? I don't know. How many citizens of this country have a radio station? I don't.

Does this mean that only corporate citizens can speak their predominately right-wing opinions to millions of listeners in an attempt to influence a Presidential election?

This "documentary" is just a long negative Bush campaign ad and in no way does it reflect the beliefs of my community. If the citizens of my community could make a documentary and broadcast it, I assure you it would be anti-Bush, not anti-Kerry.
